TRACTION ENGINE WHISTLE FIGURES IN DAMAGE SUIT.

William Wilkins Says Shrill Blasts From It Caused the Shattering of His Ear Drum.

NEW TRIAL FOR GATE ASKED.

Reasons for This Will Be Filed With in the Next Ten Days—B. C. Jennings Wants a Divorce from His Missing Wife—Bond Issue at Point Marion.

UNIONTOWN, June 22.—The shrill whistle of a traction engine is heard for a $5,000 suit instituted this morning by Attorneys Robinson & McKeon in behalf of William Wilkins of McKeesburg. Wilkins avers that the whistle, blown by one Sylvester Glover, owner of the engine, caused him, while reading at an upstairs window one day last August, to fall precipitately from his chair and sustain a shattered ear drum.

Wilkins claims that Glover stopped his traction engine in front of his domicile and without warning emitted several loud, shrill blasts from the engine's whistle. Wilkins was hard of hearing anyway and that caused him to lose the hearing from one ear entirely, and effected the other to such a degree that he can barely hold converse with anyone, even when the other party talks as loud as possible. Conspiracy is charged in the suit, Wilkins declaring that Glover got his son Cyrus, and Gilbert Glass, both young men, to assault him, which they did.

B. C. Jennings of Connellsville wants legal separation from his wife, Maggie Jennings, whose present place of residence is unknown to the libelant. Jennings was married October 3, 1891, at Manchester, Va. The couple lived together for a couple of years. Legal separation since 1903 is alleged.

Attorney H. A. Cotton has instituted suit against Walter L. Dearth of Lenzene township to recover $526.16 with interest from June 19, 1906. Miles G. Bulger, cashier of the Second National Bank of Brownsville. It is alleged that on that date Dearth gave a promissory note for the amount, payable in three months, but the paper has never been honored.

The School Directors of Point Marion have filed a financial statement, their purpose being to float a bond issue to cover the cost of erecting a school building. According to the statement the actual indebtedness of the Board is $100, while the assessed valuation of taxable property in the borough is $272,370.

Attorneys Wood N. Carr, A. E. Jones and D. N. Wood have filed a motion for a new trial for William L. Gage, convicted of murder in the first degree for the killing of Chief of Police Guess of Bell Vernon. Leave to file reasons within 10 days is reserved.

SMALL FIRE

At Early Hour This Morning Burned Scottsdale Bake Shop.

SCOTTLAND, June 22.—A small blaze at 2 o'clock this morning burned the bake shop of R. B. Kuhns on Broadway. It is not known how the fire started in the frame building of C. M. Greenhawal, where the shop is located. The firemen responded promptly and soon got the fire under control. The damage to the bake shop was $200, chiefly in loss of stock. The building was damaged $250. Since the bake oven itself could not burn, Baker Kuhns thus incurred not out his usual supply of bread amid the ruins.

ENDEAVORERS MEET.

Connellsville Pastors Address Annual Convention of the Society at Uniontown Yesterday.

The annual convention of the Young People's Christian Endeavor Society of Fayette county was held yesterday in the Second Presbyterian Church in Uniontown. The morning session opened with devotional exercises conducted by Rev. T. F. Kerr of Vandergrift, who acted in the place of Rev. W. Scott Bowman, Rev. J. S. Letendre, President of the Society, followed with a very interesting address, Rev. E. B. Burgess, pastor of Trinity Lutheran Church of Connellsville, spoke in conference on Society problems. He said: "Every one interested in the young people realizes that he has a serious problem before him. It is one of the encouraging things to know that they have a great work to accomplish. On any Sunday night you can find many times more young people on the streets than in the church."

The discussion of the subject was thrown open to the delegates and many responded. A very interesting talk on "Tenth Legion Conference" was made by Rev. C. M. Wilson, pastor of the Connellsville Christian Church. He stated that there is not enough interest taken in giving the tenth part to the Lord's work. He said it was the duty of all should be the pleasure of every Christian worker to give that much of their time to the Lord's work.

UNKNOWN FOUND

In Casselman River and Body Is Being Held at Rockwood.

ROCKWOOD, June 22.—While Bruce Upshaw and Walter Wilkins, citizens of Casselman, were on their way to work at the Southern Coal Company's mines a few mornings ago, they discovered the body of a man judged in mid-stream of the Casselman river, against a rock, one mile west of Casselman. They immediately returned to Casselman and informed Squire Herah, who accompanied them to the place of the discovery.

This fatality seems to have happened some time during Tuesday night. The dead man seems to be about 10 years of age, medium height, weighing about 60 pounds, and evidently was a laborer, because of callous hands. There were no means of identification about his person. Some of the citizens of Casselman claim to have seen him on the streets there. The body was turned over to Undertaker Jno. C. Snyder of Rockwood, who prepared it for burial.

ACQUITTAL IS ASKED.

State in Haywood Case Rests and Defense Attacks the Testimony.

JUDGE DENIES THE MOTION

Attorney Richardson Made Masterly Plea for the Prisoner, but Senator Borah Checkmated Him—Defense Opens Monday.

Belo, Idaho June 22—When the state closed its case against William D. Haywood charged with the murder of Frank Steunenberg, the defense made an unsuccessful attempt to have the court direct the jury to acquit the prisoner on the ground that the state had not proved its charge Judge Woods ruling which requires the defense to meet with evidence the case that the state has presented was made at the close of court, and it was then arranged that Haywood's counsel should make their opening statement and present their first testimony on Monday.

The prosecution introduced a few witnesses to corroborate previous evidence and then formally rested its case. The motion for an instruction to the jury to acquit was by agreement presented at the afternoon session, and the jury was sent to the jury house out of hearing.

Attorney E. F. Richardson made the principal argument in support of the motion in a long carefully prepared and eloquent address. He took for his guide the Idaho statute which forbids conviction on the uncorroborated testimony of an accomplice, quoting many authorities in support of his contention that there must be convincing corroboration entirely independent of the testimony of the accused. He declared that none of the testimony could stand without support of Orchard's story and that the statute specifically forbids its acceptance under those circumstances.

Status Forbids Conviction.
He also argued that the testimony of Orchard was the only showing that in any way connected Haywood with the crime and that the statute forbids conviction under those circumstances.

Senator Borah, who alone spoke for the state, argued with like force and eloquence that Haywood's connection had been independently shown and that Orchard's testimony had been corroborated by the independent circumstances and evidence. He also submitted a general argument to show that the state had established the existence of a general conspiracy, in which Haywood was a participant.

Clarence Darrow closed for the defense. He ridiculed the idea of a general conspiracy and contended that if the most liberal allowance were made for the entire showing of the state, it would not make out a case against the prisoner worthy of submission to the jury.

Judge Wood immediately denied the motion.

STILL IN THE LEAD

B. & O. Clerks Take the C. M. & C. Co. Into Camp.

The B. & O. Clerks continue to maintain their lead in the City League race and yesterday evening defeated the C. M. & C. Co. by score of 12 to 3. The game was all one-sided as the C. M. & C. boys failed to hit safely when hits meant tallies.

Both teams put up a good battle of baseball but several costly errors figured in the scoring.

This afternoon the Connellsville Independents composed largely of B. & O. players, won to Jeannette where they will cross bats with the strong team of that town.

LECTURE COURSE

Of the Local Y. M. C. A. the Coming Season Will Be the Best Ever Offered.

If present plans of the Y. M. C. A. are carried out Connellsville will have the best lecture course next winter the town has ever known. At a meeting of the committee on the course yesterday afternoon the nomination of the Rodpath Lecture Bureau of Boston was accepted, the Brockaway Bureau of Pittsburgh, Central of Pittsburg, Dickenson of Cincinnati and Cole of Cleveland also being considered.

The leading numbers of the course will be Governor Albert B. Cummins of Iowa originator of the Iowa Idea and the leading tariff reformer of the Republican party. Governor Cummins of Iowa is a Pennsylvania having been born in Greene county and his nativity will make him a great draw to here.

The Y. M. C. A. also has two prominent Democrats in view, one from the South and the other a Western man one of whom will be brought to appear here. No announcement of their identity will be made until arrangements for their appearance is made.

The Royal Gypsy Concert Company having won an excellent name during the past several years will be on attraction as will the Colored Jubilee Jubilee Company. Ralph Blingard, well known entertainer, humorist and lecturer will be on the bill. He is personally known by Secretary John A. Eby who declares he is without rival in his line of entertainment.

The lectures will be held in one of the theatres this time and not in the Y. M. C. A. hall as last year. If the new Sisson Theatre is completed in time they will be held there, providing satisfactory arrangement can be made.

GUILTY SHOULD BE PUNISHED

Testifies That Huston Would Not Lower His Dignity by Offering a Low Bid—Perjury Charge Should Be Made.

Harrisburg, June 22.—Former Governor Pennybacker appeared as a witness before the capital investigating commission and for more than four hours was under examination. In a good-natured manner he answered all questions in a straightforward and open way. Twice his remarks were applauded by the spectators.

Mr. Pennybacker declared that the board of public grounds and buildings, of which he was president, during the equipment of the capitol had acted in good faith. Entire confidence had been vested in the ability, honesty and integrity of Architect Huston, he stated, and John H. Sanderson had been referred to them as the best available man to secure to furnish the building.

If the state has been defrauded by the carrying out of the contracts, Mr. Pennybacker thought that treason had been committed and that the guilty parties should be punished.

Sanderson was made to give the board a sworn statement for everything he supplied, was one of his declarations. "If he cheated the state, he was guilty of perjury as well as of fraud."

His View of Responsibility.

At the close of his examination, and just before leaving the stand, Mr. Pennybacker stated that it was not right for the governor of the state to be a member of any board or commission, putting him in a position of being bound by the actions of the other members of the body. Not mentioning them by name, this is taken as an indication that the former governor does not believe he should be held responsible for the actions of his colleagues on the board which awarded the capitol contracts.

When Mr. Pennybacker took the stand Mr. Scarlet called his attention to a letter written by the witness to Mr. Carson in December, 1906, defending the action of the board, and asked if he had anything to add or detract from his statements in the letter.

"I think the letter was pretty full and explicit," Mr. Pennybacker replied.

"Let us hear your statement, Governor," said Mr. Fisher.

Mr. Pennybacker then told of the decision to equip the capitol as a fit place to conduct the official business of the great commonwealth of Pennsylvania." He said the selection of Huston as architect by the board was because he was the best man available to fill so important a position.

Huston Stood on His Dignity.

Continuing, Mr. Pennybacker said: "I sent for Huston and insisted that he accept a compensation of 3 per cent for his services. Huston told me he would lower the dignity of his profession if he accepted less than 5 per cent, but was finally prevailed upon to accept 4 per cent, which was agreed upon by him. I thus saved to the state $50,000, or more than I received for my services, as governor during my entire tenure of office."

"This man Sanderson I did not know," said Mr. Pennybacker, with emphasis. "I heard of his reputation as the best furniture man in Philadelphia. I thought we would be safe in his hands. I did know Payne, but the other contractors, to me, were mere creatures to be used by the state in the accomplishment of the great work in hand."

At the conclusion of Mr. Pennybacker's testimony adjournment was announced until next Tuesday.

DUN'S REVIEW OF TRADE.

New York, June 22.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says:

"Weather conditions throughout the country are reported as seasonable for the first time in several months and the response is immediate in all branches of business, while crop prospects have improved greatly, although there still remains much lost ground to be regained. With scarcely an exception the week's news is encouraging, especially from the west. Confidence grows with the crops and order come forward to the leading centers for large fall and winter shipments of all classes of merchandise. Most manufacturers are fully occupied on old contracts and there is little prospect of much idle machinery in the near future except on account of the customary midsummer repairs and inventories."

"Very new business is received by makers of pig iron, partly because consumers have provided for requirements well into the future and in part on account of the large contracts already placed with furnaces which prevent any pressure to obtain orders. It is also about time for inventories, and less activity is reasonable. There is not the yielding in quotations that would accompany a setback in business and the new monthly record of ore shipments in June does not suggest expectation of idleness at pig iron furnaces."

Pittsburgh, Pa., June 22.—Twenty-seven cases of typhoid fever were reported to the Bureau of Health for the last 24 hours.

LIQUOR MEN NERVOUS

Wide Spread of Prohibition Movement Rouses Them to Action.

Atlantic City, N. J., June 22.—Injection of anti-saloon sentiments into the platforms of both great political parties in the next national campaign was predicted at the session of the National Wholesale Liquor Dealers' convention in this city. Call was made for federation of every liquor interest in the United States to not only meet the present sweep of prohibition agitation, but to prepare to check the movement in the presidential conventions of 1908. speakers denouncing that growth of the crusades against liquor will force party leaders to recognize the necessity of placing some "platform doctrine" dealing with the subject before the people at the coming election.

SAVED THE LITTLE ONES

Heroic Action of Chicago Policeman, Who Sustains Injuries.

Chicago, June 22.—The lives of 200 little children were endangered by a runaway horse at Sixty-third street and South Park avenue, and it was the courage of Policeman J. O. O'Rourke that prevented a serious accident.

The children who were waiting for street cars to take them to the park for a picnic were standing in a dense crowd, when the horse came dashing down upon them. The horse was not harnessed nor attached to a vehicle.

O'Rourke, seeing that some of the children must inevitably be injured or killed, ran into the street and threw his arms around the neck of the horse.

He was dragged more than 100 feet, his right shoulder was fractured, as were some of the bones in his right hand, but he held on, and checked the horse within 20 feet of the children.

LIGHTNING SOLVES MYSTERY

Charles Wawson, Stricken With Terrible Confesses to Crime.

Pottsville, Pa., June 22.—Stricken with fear when a bolt of lightning struck in the yard of the county prison here, Charles Wawson of Shewanoah, arrested on the charge of killing his sweetheart, cowered in his cell, pleading for mercy, and when taken to the prison office confessed that he had shot the girl because she had refused to marry him. He also confessed that $400 had been hidden by him and that his story of being robbed of $800 was untrue.

Wawson had been shaming himself since his arrest and his case had been postponed until September for the purpose of endeavoring to effect a cure. Now he is acting perfectly sane, but is in terror of being hung for his crime.

Stockholders' Inspector Reports Splendid Progress

Each year the stockholders of this Company elect one of their members to visit the plantation, investigate it thoroughly, and verify the statements made by the Company. The representative elected this year is Dr. Everett van Slyke of New York City, who has recently returned from his trip, and whose report is now published in a large handsome booklet, prettily illustrated. We will gladly send this report free to any address. Dr. van Slyke's verdict may be judged from the following paragraph, in which he summarizes his impression of the Company's work.

Opinions of Large Stockholders Just Returned From Company's Estate (May 25th, 1907.)

"I am not only ready to confirm all that the Inspector has said, but also to declare that the literature of the Company not only does not overstate the picture but under states it. It describes not the whole truth before the public.

The proposition is too great. Their assured dividends are beyond peradventure. Mathematics, science and the many other qualities of hard woods now growing on the Company's property would alone pay these dividends for years to come, leaving the logwood, wild timber, tropical species, and fruit woods out of account. With the great plantations of hemlock in a few years this will be an increase of dividends that will be enormous. The Company is planting 15,000 acres of hemlock, which will of itself pay 10 per cent annual dividends on the capital stock."

THE LION AND THE MOUSE.

By CHARLES KLEIN.

A Story of American Life Novelized From the Play by ARTHUR HORNBLOW.

COPYRIGHT, 1906, BY C. W. DILLINGHAM COMPANY.

It was nearly 10 o'clock when they had finished. They sat a little longer listening to the gypsy music, weird and barbaric. Very pointedly, Shirley remarked:

"I for one preferred the music this afternoon."

"Why?" inquired Jefferson, ignoring the persistent note in her voice.

"Because you were more available," she retorted rather crossly. "But she could never remain angry long, and when they said good night she whispered demurely:

"Are you cross with me, Jeff?"

He turned his head away, and she saw that his face was singularly drawn and grave.

"Cross—no. Good night. God bless you," he said, harshly gulping down a lump that rose in his throat. Then grasping her hand he hurried away.

Completely mystified, Shirley and her companion turned to the office to get the key of their room. As the man handed it to Shirley he passed her also a telegram which had just come. She changed color. She did not like telegrams. She always had a dread of them, for with her sudden news was usually bad news. Could this, she thought, explain Jefferson's strange behavior? Trembling, she tore open the envelope and read:

Come home at once. MOTHER.

CHAPTER V.

THIS were four days out from port. Two days more and they would sight Sandy Hook, and Shirley would know the worst. She had caught the North German Lloyd boat at Cherbourg two days after receiving the cablegram from New York. Mrs. Blake had insisted on coming along in spite of her niece's protests. Shirley argued that she had crossed alone when coming; she could go back the same way. Besides, was not Mr. Ryder returning home on the same ship? He would be company and protection both. But Mrs. Blake was bent on making the voyage. She had not seen her sister for many years, and, moreover, this sudden summons from America had upset her own plans.

The alarming summons home and the terrible shock she had experienced the following morning when Jefferson showed her the newspaper article with its astounding and heartrending news about her father had almost prostrated Shirley. The blow was all the greater it gave him to be a whole week alone with Shirley.

Thus events, combined with the weather, conspired to bring Shirley and Jefferson more closely together. The sea had been rough ever since they sailed, keeping Mrs. Blake confined to her stateroom almost continuously. They were therefore constantly in one another's company, and, slowly, unconsciously, there was taking root in their hearts the germ of the only real and lasting love—the love born of something higher than mere physical attraction, the nobler, more enduring affection that is born of mutual sympathy, association and companionship.

Jefferson had been casting furtive glances at his companion, and as he noted her serious, pensive face he thought how pretty she was. He wondered what she was thinking of, and suddenly inspired no doubt by the mysterious power that enables some people to read the thoughts of others, he said abruptly:

"Shirley, I can read your thoughts. You were thinking of me."

She was startled for a moment, but immediately recovered her self-possession. It never occurred to her to deny it. She pondered for a moment and then replied:

"You are right, Jeff. I was thinking of you. How did you guess?"

He leaned over her and took her hand. She made no resistance. Her delicate, slender hand lay passively in his big brown one and met his grasp frankly, cordially. He whispered:

"What were you thinking of me—good or bad?"

"Good, of course. How could I think anything bad of you?"

She turned her eyes on him in wonderment; then she went on:

"I was wondering how a girl could distinguish between the feeling she has for a man she merely likes and the feeling she has for a man she loves."

Jefferson bent eagerly forward so as to lose no word that might fall on those coveted lips.

"In what category would I be placed?" he asked.

"I don't quite know," she answered laughingly. Then seriously she added:

"Jeff, why should we act like children? Your actions, more than your words, have told me that you love me. I have known it all along. If I have appeared cold and indifferent, it is because—"

She hesitated.

"Because?" echoed Jefferson anxiously, as if his whole future depended on that reason.

"Because I was not sure of myself. Would it be womanly or honorable on my part to encourage you unless I felt I reciprocated your feelings? You are young. One day you will be very rich. The whole world lies before you. There are plenty of women who would willingly give you their love."

"No, no!" he burst out in vigorous protest. "It is you I want, Shirley—you alone."

Grasping her hand more closely, he went on, passion vibrating in every note of his voice: "I love you, Shirley. I've loved you from the very first evening I met you. I want you to be my wife."

Shirley looked straight up into the blue eyes so eagerly bent down on hers, so entwining in their expression, and in a gentle voice full of emotion she answered:

"Jefferson, you have done me the greatest honor a man can do a woman. Don't ask me to answer you now. I like you very much. I more than like you. Whether it is love I feel for you, that I have not yet determined. Give me time. My present trouble and then my literary work—"

"I know," agreed Jefferson, "that this is hardly the time to speak of such matters. Your father has first call on your attention. But as to your literary work I do not understand."

"Simply this: I am ambitious. I have had a little success—just enough to crave more. I realize that marriage would put an extinguisher on all aspirations in that direction."

"Is marriage so very commonplace?"

"Not commonplace, but there is no room in marriage for a woman having personal ambitions of her own. Once married her duty is to her husband and her children, and I am afraid she would be unkinded down her cheeks."

Suddenly she heard a familiar step behind her, and Jefferson joined her at the rail. The wind was due west and blowing half a gale, so where they were standing—one of the most exposed parts of the ship—it was difficult to keep one's feet, to say nothing of hearing any one speak.

"It's pretty windy here, Shirley," shouted Jefferson, standing himself against a stanchion. "Don't you want to walk a little?"

He had begun to call her by her first name quite naturally, as if it were a matter of course. Indeed, their relations had come to be more like those of brother and sister than anything else. Shirley was too much troubled over the news from home to have a mind for other things, and in her distress she had turned to Jefferson for advice and help as she would have looked to an elder brother.

He spoke so earnestly that Shirley looked at him in surprise. She knew he was serious, but she had not suspected that he thought so deeply on these matters. Her heart told her that he was uttering the true philosophy of the ages. She said:

"Why, Jefferson, you talk like a book. Perhaps you are right. I have no wish to be a bluestocking and deserted in my old age, far from it. But give me time to think. Let us first ascertain the extent of this disaster which has overtaken my father. Then if you still care for me, and if I have charged you mind," here she glanced slyly at him, "we will resume our discussion."

Again she held out her hand, which he had refused.

"Is it a bargain?" she asked.

"It's a bargain," he murmured, raising the white hand to his lips. A fierce longing rose within him to take her in his arms and kiss passionately the ton to be temporarily relieved from his judicial duties. He was instantly granted a leave of absence and went at once to his home in Madison avenue, where he shut himself up in his library, sitting for hours at his desk wrestling with documents and legal tomes in a pathetic endeavor to find some way out, trying to elude this not in which unseen hands had entangled him.

What an end to his career! To have struggled and achieved for half a century, to have built up a reputation year by year, as a man builds a house brick by brick, only to see the whole crumble to his feet like dust! To have ruined the respect of the country, to have made a name as the most incorruptible of public servants, and now to be branded as a common bribe taker! Could he be dreaming? It was too incredible! What would his daughter say? His wife? Ah, his wife and his child—they knew he had been innocent of wrongdoing. The very idea was ridiculous. At most he had been careless. Yet he was certainly to blame. He ought to have seen the trap so carefully prepared and laid which he had walked as if blindfolded. That extra $50,000 worth of stock, on which he had never received a cent interest, had been the decoy in a carefully thought out plot. They, the plotters, well knew how ignorant he was of financial matters, and he had been an easy victim. Who would believe his story that the stock had been sent to him with a plausibly worded letter to the effect that it represented a bonus on his own investment? Now he came to think of it, calmly and rationally, he would not believe it himself. As usual, he had mislaid or destroyed the secretary's letter, and there was only his word against the company's book to substantiate what would appear a most improbable if not impossible occurrence.

It was his conviction of his own good faith that made his present dilemma all the more cruel. Had he really been grainer had he really taken the stock as a bribe, he would not care so much, for then he would have foreseen and discounted the chances of exposure. Yet there was no doubt possible. He was the victim of a conspiracy; there was an organized plot to ruin him, to get him out of the way. The "Interest" scared him, resented his judicial decisions, and they had acted in molding to accomplish their purpose. How could he fight them back, what could he do to protect himself? He had no proofs of a conspiracy, his enemies worked in the dark, there was no way in which he could reach them or know who they were.

"It's a bargain," he murmured.

mouth that lay limpishly near his own, but his courage failed him. After he, reseated, he had not yet the right.

A few minutes later they left the dock and went down stairs to dress for dinner. That same evening they stood again at the rail watching the mysterious phosphorescence as it sparkled in the moonlight. Her thoughts traveling faster than the ship, Shirley suddenly asked:

"You are right, Jeff. I was thinking of you. How did you guess?"

He leaned over her and took her hand. She made no resistance. Her delicate, slender hand lay passively in his big brown one and met his grasp frankly, cordially. He whispered:

Mr. G. L. Stephenson of Petersburgh, Ohio, says: "For over ten years I have constantly used Dr. Evans' Pills, instilling them in the blood almost daily. He is a hardy, strong, healthy man, and I have never believed him to be in the least degree ill. Before I used Dr. Evans' Kidney Pills I had suffered from attacks of kidney trouble which brought on sharp and piercing pains in the small of the back which were always more severe after stooping or twisting my back in any way. The kidney sensations became irregular and distressing and I suffered a great deal from headache and spells of dizziness. I tried many different remedies, but never found anything so satisfactory as Dr. Evans' Kidney Pills. They relieved me so thoroughly that I was pleased to give the testimonial I spoke of. I have never suffered so severely since that time, and whenever an attack of kidney trouble comes on I have always taken fresh doses of Dr. Evans' Kidney Pills and have found complete relief."
